FORMER SENATE PRESIDENT JODI WALONGA yesterday called the Office of the Ombudsman's resolution absolving Commission on Elections Chair Benjamin Abalos and other officials involved in the P1.3-billion poll automation deal 'an unthinkable prospect' of the Supreme Court decision that ousted the Grateles contract with Mega Inc.

She also accused the Ombudsman of being 'biased' and 'unimpartial' in its handling of the case.

Walonga's comments came as the Ombudsman's resolution recommending that the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) be held in contempt of court for failing to comply with the Supreme Court's decision to oust Mega Inc. from the poll automation deal.

Residents still in the dark dispute Meralco claim

Manila—It is a common misconception that Meralco is a monopoly. In fact, it is a public utility company that is regulated by the government.

The utility is accused of monopolizing the electricity market in the Philippines. It is alleged that Meralco has been able to maintain its dominance in the market by using its political connections to the government.

Many residents in the Philippines are still in the dark, both literally and figuratively, about the true nature of Meralco's operations. They are often misled by the company's public relations efforts.

It is important for the public to understand the true nature of Meralco's operations. This is especially true in the context of the recent dispute over the company's claim to be a monopoly.

The dispute is a complex one, involving legal and political issues. It is a battle that has been going on for many years.

At the heart of the dispute is the question of whether Meralco is a monopoly. This is a question that has been debated for decades. The answer is not simple.

One of the main arguments in favor of Meralco's claim to be a monopoly is that it is the only company in the Philippines that provides electricity to the entire country.

However, this argument is flawed. There are many other companies in the Philippines that provide electricity to parts of the country. These companies are often smaller and less powerful than Meralco.

Another argument in favor of Meralco's claim is that it has a long history of providing electricity to the Philippines. This history is often cited as evidence of its dominance in the market.

However, this argument is also flawed. Many other companies have a long history of providing electricity to the Philippines. The fact that a company has a long history does not necessarily mean it is a monopoly.

The truth is that the question of whether Meralco is a monopoly is a complex one. It is a question that requires a detailed analysis of the company's operations and the market in which it operates.

Until a definitive answer is reached, the dispute will continue. This is a situation that is not in the best interests of the Philippines. It is time for the government to take action to resolve the dispute.

The government should establish a fair and transparent process for determining whether Meralco is a monopoly. This process should be based on objective criteria and should be open to public scrutiny.

Only through such a process can the true nature of Meralco's operations be revealed. Only then can the residents of the Philippines be put in the light.

The residents of the Philippines deserve to know the truth about Meralco. They deserve to know whether the company is a monopoly and what this means for them.

It is the responsibility of the government to provide this information to the residents. It is the responsibility of the media to report on the dispute accurately and fairly.

As the dispute continues, the residents of the Philippines are left in the dark. They are unsure of what the true nature of Meralco's operations is and what this means for them.

The government and the media have a responsibility to provide the residents with the information they need to make informed decisions. They must not allow Meralco to continue its campaign of misinformation.

RP gets $410M in loans from World Bank

To benefit education, health, LGLs

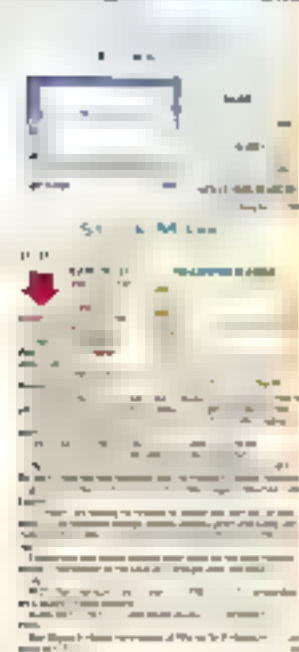

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine government has secured a $410-million loan from the World Bank to fund a series of projects aimed at improving the quality of basic education, health care, and local government services. The loan, which is part of a larger $1.2-billion credit line, will be used to finance a variety of projects, including the construction of new schools, the renovation of existing ones, and the provision of health services to underserved areas. The projects are expected to benefit millions of Filipinos, particularly in the poorest regions of the country.

Peso surges to 49 88 to a dollar

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine peso surged to a high of 49.88 to a dollar today, its highest level in over a year. The surge was driven by a combination of factors, including a strong performance in the stock market and a decline in the value of the dollar. The peso's rise has led to a significant increase in the value of foreign investments in the Philippines, and it has also helped to reduce the cost of imports. However, some analysts warn that the surge could lead to inflationary pressures in the future.

Political winds buffet P2-B billboard industry

MANILA, Philippines — The billboard industry in the Philippines is facing a storm of political winds. The industry, which is worth an estimated $2 billion a year, has been hit hard by a series of government actions aimed at reducing the number of billboards in urban areas. The government has argued that billboards are a major source of visual pollution and that they distract drivers from the road. However, the industry claims that billboards are an important part of the country's advertising landscape and that they provide a valuable source of revenue for local governments.

1. The first step is to identify the variables in the model. In this case, the variables are the number of hours worked per week (X_1), the number of children under the age of 18 in the household (X_2), and the number of children under the age of 18 in the household who are under the age of 6 (X_3).

For the purpose of this study, the following hypotheses were formulated:

A schematic diagram of a 2D hexagonal lattice. A central hexagon is labeled '1'. It is surrounded by six other hexagons, each labeled with a number from 2 to 7. The hexagons are arranged in a honeycomb pattern. The central hexagon is at the bottom center. The hexagons are labeled 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 in a clockwise direction starting from the center.

Figure 1. Schematic representation of the experimental design. The subjects were divided into two groups: the control group and the experimental group. The control group received a placebo, while the experimental group received a combination of a placebo and a specific intervention. The subjects were then subjected to a series of tests, including a baseline test, a post-intervention test, and a follow-up test. The results of the tests were compared between the two groups to determine the effectiveness of the intervention.

The best rivalry in the tech world

BY JEFFREY M. HARRIS
 The rivalry between Apple and Microsoft is one of the most intense in the tech world. It's a rivalry that has shaped the industry and the way we use technology. Apple's sleek design and user-friendly interface have made it a favorite among consumers, while Microsoft's powerful software and services have made it a favorite among businesses. The competition between the two companies has led to some of the most innovative products in the tech world, including the iPhone, iPad, and Windows 10. This rivalry is not just about products, but also about the way the companies approach business and the way they interact with their customers. It's a rivalry that has made the tech world a more interesting and competitive place.

20th century's 'purg'
The 20th century has been a time of great change and upheaval. It has been a time of great progress and discovery, but it has also been a time of great suffering and pain. The world has been torn apart by war, and millions of people have died. The environment has been destroyed, and the climate is changing. The world is a much different place than it was in 1900, and it is not clear what the future holds.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has increased from 750 million to 850 million. In 1990, 15% of the world's population was illiterate. By 2000, the percentage had risen to 16%. The United Nations estimates that by 2015, the number of illiterate people in the world will reach 900 million.
